

however, is simply a matter of taste. The travelling costume is very simple, or copies of the bride, in this style of fashion is very liberal, with the exception that the dresses must quite escape the ground. The travelling dress is mostly of Chintz, cashmere, silk, or cloth. Brocade and lace are also in vogue in cashmere, trimmings with the openwork X-Saxon embroidery are very serviceable and handsome. Bonnets covered with tiny little feathers or ostrich tips or muskins plus in tulip shape or fur, felt, or beaver, are considered proper for travelling.

DRESSES FOR HOME WEAR.

Among some very pretty house dresses is the united design of the Junia waist and Gullia walking skirt. The material of sage green serge is trimmed with striped Surah in olive, purple, sage green and gold stripes. The skirt is composed of a deep full pleating of canary hair serge, over which is a gracefully draped overskirt trimmed with lengthwise bands of the Surah, and silk and chenille fringe in which the colors of the Surah are combined. The round waist is ornamented with four box pleats in the centre of the back and front, shirred in to the waist. The full sleeves are shirred around the lower end and completed with a side-peaked ruffle. It should be added that the overskirt is draped at the left side quite near the hip, and is fastened by a buckle and long cords. One of the most elaborate of the new basques is the Tolita. This is tight-fitting, and is cut with a pointed back and front. A pleated sash is fastened on the edge of the basque behind, commencing under the arms and finished with an immense bow at the waist. A set of graduated bows, one for each sleeve, the front bows being the largest, will finish the blouse. The long tight sleeves are ornamented with shirred puffings about the elbow, and end with cuffs at the wrist.

The new veils have large dots on the black net sold to be held close to the eyes. Veils of smaller dots, though not of late date, are safer and more becoming. Tissue and grenadine veils come in white, sage green, olive green, and cream color, with or without dots.

WINTER BONNETS AND HATS.

The winter bonnets and hats are conspicuous through their lack of hardness or naughtiness. The lace surroundings are all fluffy, to which is added the charm of fluffy hair fringes on the forehead. These charming accessories to beauty give a pliant loveliness to the plainest of hats.

WILLIAM WILSON

AND

Anthony Comstock.

TO THE PUBLIC AND CITIZENS OF AMERICA:

Anthony Comstock has this day published a letter in which he claims to have been honorably acquitted by the Courts of the charge of that I had presented against him, and also states in his letter that he did not hide himself from justice.

I shall prove that he did hide from justice, or that his clerks hid about him (they clerks) having stated to myself and several witnesses that Anthony Comstock had gone into the country and would not be back for a week. I paid $100 to a private detective, who was instrumental in disclosing the whereabouts of Anthony Comstock, which led to his arrest.

What followed after the arrest shall, in every particular, be described below, and the public will be allowed to judge and pronounce upon the correctness of the matter.
